Description
Currently the unix-socket interface reads from the socket, parses messages and implements the methods to fulfill those needs. This should be refactored to separate the functionality from the interface.

This would allow library users to make use of the operations provided by the socket without going over the socket. It would also make it easier for new interfaces to be made to the functionality.

Related issues:
Related to Task #2693: tracking: libsuricata  In Progress

History
#1 - 09/23/2021 02:24 PM - Jason Ish
- Related to Task #2693: tracking: libsuricata added